

News Bytes!

Special Edition

Computer Center to change name

The logo for Information Technology Systems and Services (itss) is written in a lowercase, italicized, serif font.

Information Technology Systems and Services

On January 1, 2002, the UND Computer Center will change its name to Information Technology Systems and Services. This change reflects our ongoing effort to provide leadership, instruction and access to information and technology resources in support of higher education, research and public service. We will continue to provide our current services in addition to embracing leading edge technology.

Our goals are to:

- Provide existing information technology services to the UND and NDUS communities and constituents

- Provide network services that enhance teaching, learning, research, and service
- Provide secure information systems and networks to assure privacy and reliability of information
- Enrich learning and research through the use of information technology
- Enable the use of information technology through guidance, support, and instruction
- Provide state-of-the-art NDUS enterprise resource planning systems.

Starting January 1, 2002, you can also access our web site at <http://www.und.nodak.edu/dept/itss> for more information.

"This change reflects our ongoing effort to provide leadership."

We are excited about the new opportunities these changes represent for all of us and look forward to working with you on current and future endeavors. Our enthusiastic

Help Center staff is still available at 777-2222 for more information. ■

Information Technology
Systems and Services
University of North Dakota
Post Office Box 9041
701.777.3171 (office)
701.777.3978 (fax)
www.und.edu/dept/itss

Winter 2001